George W: My fellow Americans ...

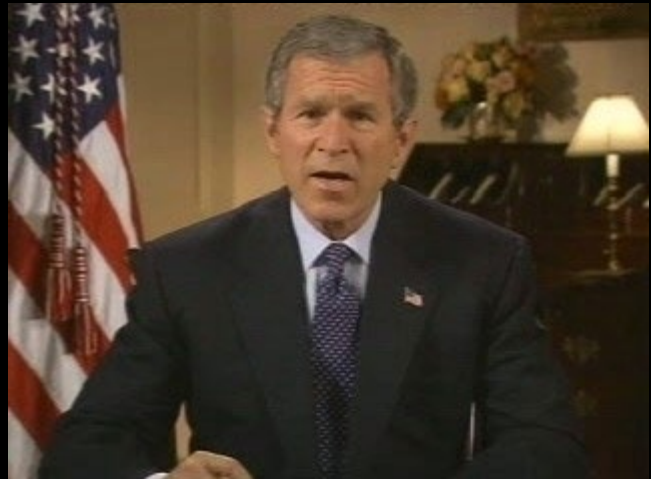

George W: Tonight I come to you with news from the front lines in our most recent war.

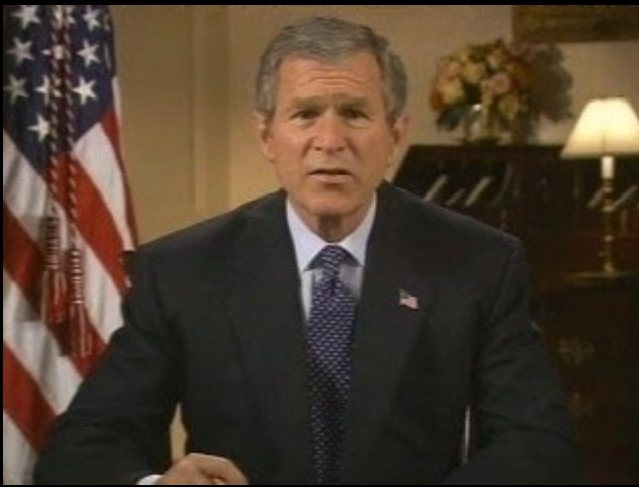

George W: No, it's not our War on Terror, which I can tell ya, partners, is going great over in that Afganiranistan.

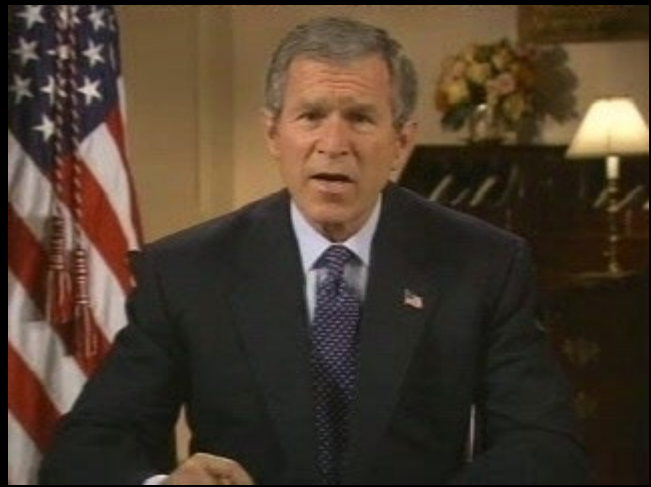

George W: It's not on our War on Iraq, where we're about to invade and conquer that bastard Saddam and bring back good old American values to the people of Iraq in the name of my father. Daddy, I love ya. Georgie done good.

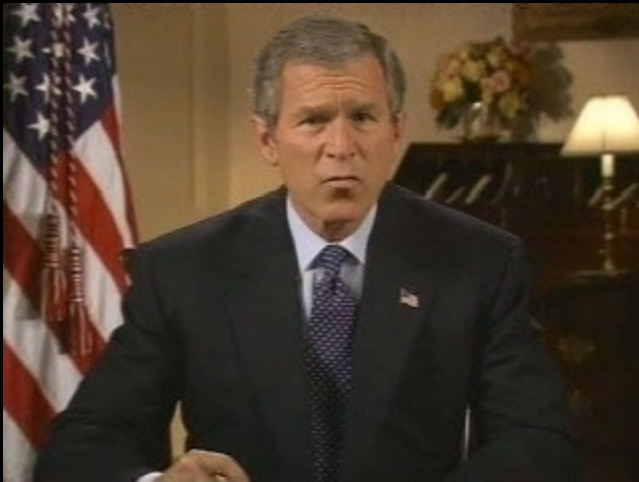

George W: It's also not our war on the environment. Though I am pleased to announce that we're about to open up the Arctic Wildlife preserves for the exploitation of our wonderful American oil companies.

George W: Through drilling and the exploitation of our natural reserves, America will now have the power to stand up and say "no" to the world's oil barons. That freedom from oppression, partners, is what America is all about.

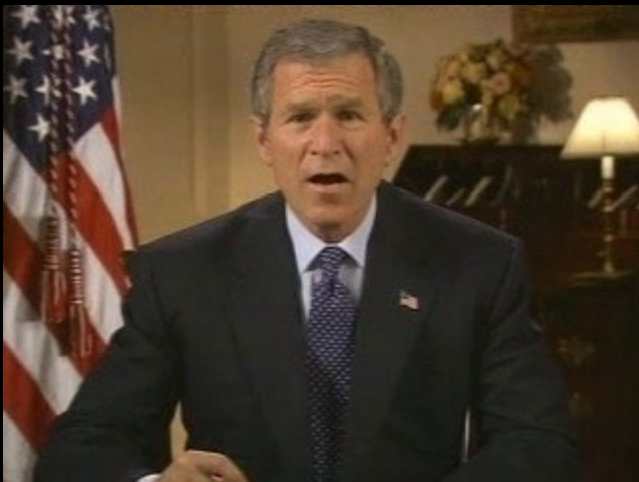

George W: But that's not what I'm here to talk to you about. Tonight I'm here to talk to you about our latest war, the war on immoral and indecent behavior on national cable television.

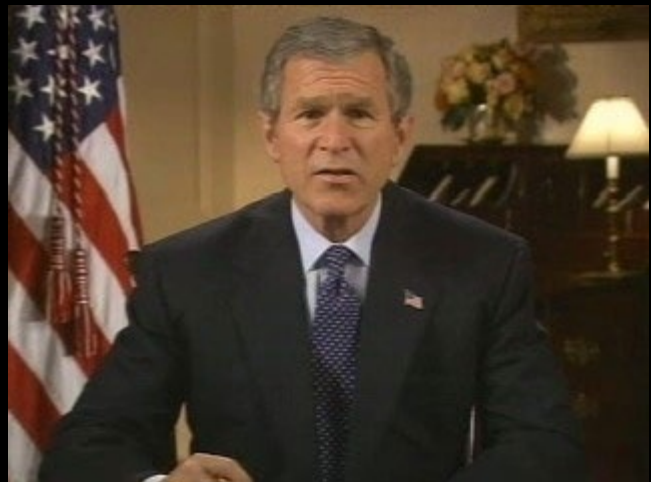

George W: Y'all know that I don't believe in TV and I don't have it at the ranch. Fancy lights, colors, little elves in the picture frames. George W. wants no part of that, no siree. Don't believe it, don't want it, can go without it.

George W: However, my poor precious innocent twin daughters seem to have developed a thing for it. They like that Sponge Bob fella. Heh. Heh. Heh. Looks like Tom Ridge after that late night bender we had the other week. Heh. Heh. Heh. Pennsylvanians sure can't hold their liquor.

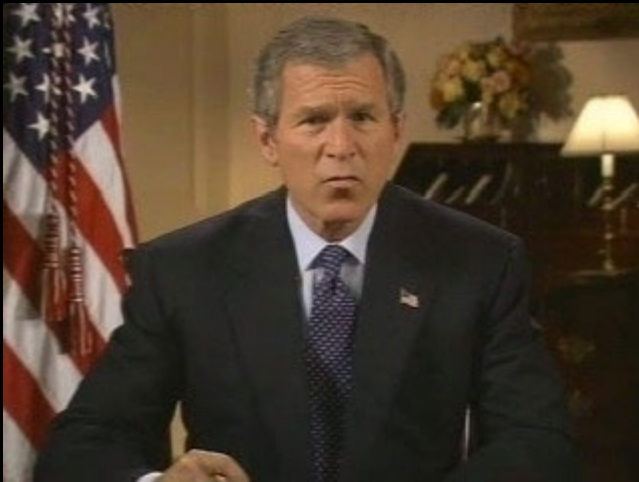

George W: But there was something darker, something that has changed my poor innocent daughters' lives forever. A television station has taken over their lives and has made them act improperly on something called a "web cam."

George W: Dick Cheney, a straight shooter himself, saw my daughters do something that they'd never ever think of doing on their own. Something so foul and so unamerican that their mother and I have

George W: My fellow Americans, if this vile and heinous mind control can happen to my precious innocent daughters, it can happen to anyone. Therefore, we're going to war. Yes siree, a new war.

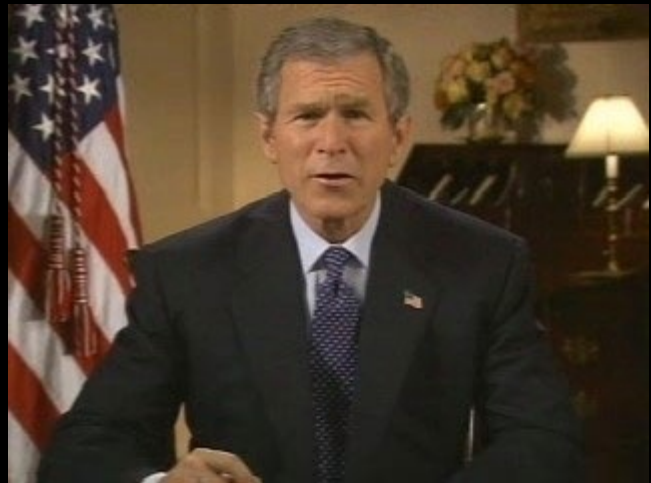

no other choice but to send my precious girls to a boarding school in Canada to relearn their American values.

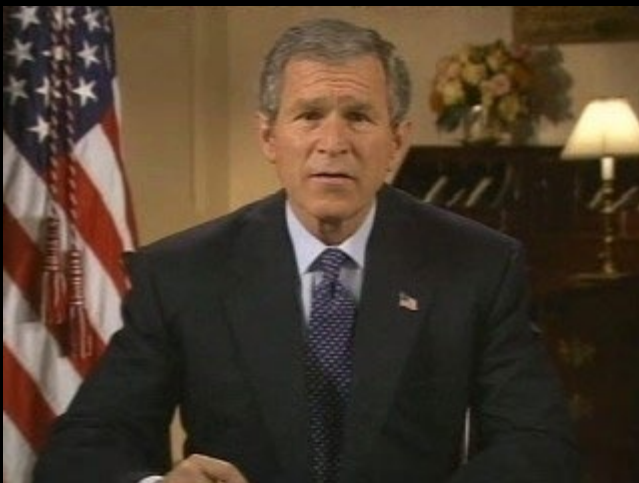

George W: A war against indecency, I tell ya. A war against the forces that can and will take your daughter's innocence through electronic mind control.

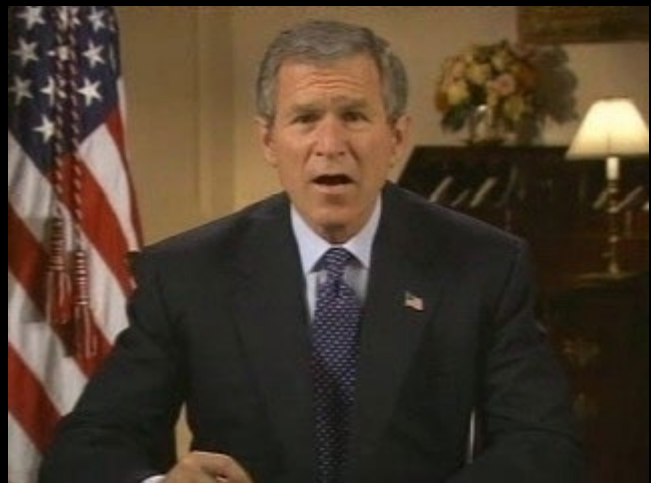

George W: While I don't know the name of the channel that prompted my daughters' actions, they were far too wasted to give me that, we are taking actions to find out who was responsible.

George W: Heh. Heh. Heh. The little bastards in the FBI's counter espionage division have hooked up a fancy doo-hickey that will trace the signal to the source and show you all the face of evil.

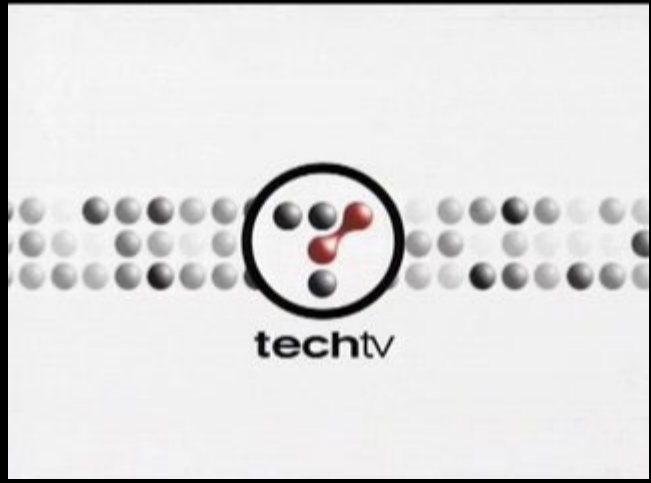

George W: In just a few seconds you'll see the face, the one person that is responsible for ... it's ready? Okay fellas, let's round them up.

George W: Ladies and Gentlemen, partners and good old boys, I give you the newest face of evil, terror suspect number one, and the person that corrupted my daughters. Live from the studio where the did it. Take it away, cowpokes!

Megan: Uh, why is that camera on me?

We'll be right back ...
