

hot buttered days AT TechTV ...

Dave: So I've called you all here today to discuss Mr. James' latest possible purchase something called "TechTV." Has anyone heard of it?

Lisa: Dave, I can't believe you haven't heard of TechTV, it's all the rage in the break room.
Matthew: Yah, it's rage-o-ramic!

Dave: Thank you Matthew, now Lisa, I thought we had banned the TV from the break room after someone was spending too much time watching "Invader Zim" instead of doing actual work?

Matthew: There's never too much of "Invader Zim!"
Lisa: Shut up, Matthew ...
Matthew: Well it's true!

Dave: So noted. So what type of programs does this channel feature? I mean will it compliment our morning drive time schedule?

Matthew: Dave, they're the greatest, after Zim of course! They're not Zimtastic but they're getting there.
 Lisa: Ixnay on the Zimstay, Matthew!

Dave: So other than Matthew's few minutes between obsessively watching "Invader Zim" have the rest of you seen this channel?
 Bill: I, for one, am all for this purchase, chief!

Dave: And, why's that Bill?
 Bill: Two words: "Morgan Webb's enormous windows tips."
 Dave: Bill, oh golly, that's so wrong I'm going to just move on.

Joe: That TechTV. That's the channel where they show you how to do all the electrical stuff? Like putting the Gamecube and Xbox into a computer case right? What losers! I did that long before they came up with the idea!

Dave: Joe, I don't think duct taping game systems to the side of Matthew's computer so he could get even less work done during the day counts as the type of computer modifications that they demonstrate on the channel.

Joe: Dude! That's so bogus! They're a wannabe network!
 Catherine: Here we go again.
 Joe: Well they are! Any true geek knows you do EVERYTHING with duct tape!

Dave: Which is why our elevators only work if your body weight is less than sixty five pounds.
 Joe: Hey when the Swedish bikini team comes up in that elevator you'll thank me dude!
 Dave: So noted.

Dave: Getting back on topic here, does anyone else have a comment about the programming.
 Bill: Would it be possible ...?
 Dave: For Morgan Webb to fly out and show you her enormous windows tips over a candle light dinner?

Bill: That's right.
 Dave: Sadly, no. I believe she's a skilled computer programmer, not a subject of lust, Bill.
 Bill: Damn you, Evil Otto.
 Matthew: Computers? You mean she's a robot like Invader Zim?

Dave: Matthew, there are no robots at TechTV.
 Matthew: But what about Leo Laporte's robotic hair?
 Dave: I believe the popular catch phrase is "Riiiiiiiiiiight."

Beth: So if Mr. James buys the station, will our stocks go up? Or will we be better off playing the new "Billionaire Bill's Bountyball Lotto?"
 Joe: Yah, will Mr. James cough up more

Dave: Uh-huh. So does anyone have any other comments on the TechTV situation that I can actually pass on to Mr. James before he decides to purchase the money to keep us happy if this goes through?

Matthew: Yah, why do they tie their reporters up with strings? It looks kind of painful ... and kind of fun!
::giggle::

Matthew: Are you sure? I've seen pictures of that Becky Worley chick on the internet and she had strings all over her ...
Lisa: Look, Matthew, it's time for "Invader Zim!"
Matthew: Oh goodie! Can I go now?
Dave: Thank you, Lisa.

Bill Gates: Ratfarts.

Dave: Strings?
Lisa: I think he's referring to "the Thunderbirds."
Dave: Ah, Matthew "the Thunderbirds" were a 60's British television series featuring puppets. Not TechTV newscasters.

Dave: So what should I tell Mr. James about this purchase. Should he buy or should he pass?
All: Pass!
Dave: Right, that's one mega-merger that we can all do without.

We'll be right back ...
