

missing those days at techtv ...

Erica: Is it safe for your children to watch TechTV?

Erica: With pending raids by the Presidential Decency Council hanging over the heads of those who work here, we, ourselves, are asking questions about the moral fabric of the very network that pays us in lottery tickets. Here with more on the story is our own Kris Kosach.

Kris: Thank you, Erica. As you all know, recent trends at TechTV have left us all wondering if it's safe for kids to watch. From topless webcam escapades on Martin's show, to Leo Laporte's hilarious yet inappropriate behavior on the air, to the cloning of well known personalities, TechTV seems to be a pit of degradation these days.

Kris: But it's not our own experiences that we want to focus on. We want to know what you, the American public, feels about our station. Let's look at some recent opinions I solicited at a local business.

Man: Yah I love TechTV. I watch it all the time. That Jessica Corbin ... man, is

Man: My kids? I don't have any but I think that it's okay since they blur the naked people and they only imply the dirty stuff.

she coming back any time soon?

Man: It's not like Howard Stern. I took the advice from the Screen Savers and went frame by frame on one of the girlie photo shoots with my digital vcr and do you know what I saw?

Man: There's nude pictures of Richard Nixon on every Howard Stern show! Yup, "tricky Dick" lives on as a subliminal message! Hey, why ya backing away from me slowly? It's the truth!

Woman: TechTV? Don't get me started. I went out on a date with Patrick Norton last week.

Woman: A girl has ... wants. A girl has ... needs. A big manly man with muscles out the wazoo. I wanted him and that sledgehammer too ...

Woman: But NOOOOOOOOO, I couldn't pull him away from his new iBOOK. He didn't want to kiss, he didn't want to hug, he wanted to talk about peace, enlightenment and the truth of MAC. What a waste of a bohunk!

Woman: And what's this Renuit "Hedgebob" Zaflongleburger stuff? Did someone drop him on his head or something?

Man: I love Leo. He's my hero.

Man: He said that it was okay to work pantsless and that he worked in his underwear at home all the time! He's so cool! I always wanted to be just like him!

Man: In fact, I'm not wearing any clothes right now! Want to come play a game of solitaire with me? What do you mean "go play solitaire with yourself?" Where ya going? I've got my deck out right now!

Man: TechTV? I don't want to talk about that stupid channel.

Man: My wife started watching it. She saw the strong independent women featured there and suddenly she didn't want to fix my dinner!

Man: She started watching that Michaela woman and then she stopped shaving her legs and she wanted to be called "Charlie-Boy."

Man: The worst came in the bedroom, oh it was horrible -- the stuff she learned on TechTV's new pinko commie sex show. Oh my god, TechTV spoiled my life!

Erica: Stop the footage. Kris, you're one of the Kris Kosach clones aren't you?

Kris: Uh, umm, why would you say that?

Erica: The real Kris Kosach tends to avoid taking off her pants and dancing around the studio in her underwear while her segments are playing.

Kris: But it's what she'd do! Kevin Rose told me that! You can trust Kevin Rose!

Erica: Irony is the bane of clones everywhere. Don't worry folks, I'll see that this clone is turned over for "probing" by Robert Heron and the Presidential Decency Council.
 Kris: Robert Heron? NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!
 Anyone but him!

Erica: Up next, we'll explore the question of what happened to the real Kris Kosach, and if she the man in drag who boxed in the place of Martin Sargent on tonight's Showtime extravaganza, after this short break.

Sumi: What happened indeed, Erica!
 Mohahahahaha!
