

HAPPY DAYS AT TECHTV ...

Erica: "Morgan Webb, will you marry me?" Not since "What's the frequency Kenneth" has a catch phrase disturbed so many Americans.

Erica: First appearing on Madonna's "American Life" website, copycat hackers have had a field day defacing web sites with images of TechTV's own Morgan Webb in some sort of twisted attempt at worshipping this 14 year old superstar.

Erica: When will the hacking end? On this special edition of TechTV we'll explore that very question as just moments ago the supposedly "unhackable" servers at Microsoft were defaced with the message during the Microsoft stockholders' meeting.

Erica: Here with more on the situation is Microsoft's own information spokesperson, Microsoft Bob. Hello Bob, welcome to

Microsoft Bob: Holy banana splits -- I would trade eight camels and my autographed copy of "Po Leo Yo Guide to Spokespersoning Like You Know What You're Techlive!

Erica: Riiiiiiight.

Doing 2002" for one night with you, my beauty!

Microsoft Bob: Here is the "Riiiiiiight" again, what does it mean, my beauty?

Erica: Umm ... uh ... Bob, how does Microsoft explain the hacking of it's supposedly "unhackable" servers during the stockholders' meeting?

Microsoft Bob: Hacking? There was no hacking here. The servers are running fine!

Erica: But sir, we all saw the defacing of your servers by persons unknown with the popular slogan, "Morgan Webb, will you marry me?"

Microsoft Bob: There was no hacking. No hacking here! Buy our server in large volumes, indeed! You all should trust Microsoft!

Erica: How can you tell them that they can trust Microsoft when the entire world just saw your servers hacked on live televisions?

Microsoft Bob: No hacking, that was just a clerical error. All the screens are fixed!

Erica: So they're all fixed now?

Microsoft Bob: Yes, yes, there was a problem with the display, the computers weren't running our software, our lead programmer dropped acid and freaked out. He hijacked a busload of penguins. So it's sort of a Microsoft family crisis. Bye!

Erica: Sir, while I admire your devotion to the movie "Better off Dead" it still doesn't explain how your supposedly "unhackable" computers were indeed hacked today.

Microsoft Bob: No hack here! No hack here! We had are spirits in the material world! Yah, spirits in the material world!

Erica: Sir, do you think talking in gibberish and quoting old "Police" songs is really going to throw off reporters?

Microsoft Bob: It works for Ari Fleischer doesn't it?

Erica: Riiiiiiight. So sir, you're sure that the servers are working properly?

Microsoft Bob: Yes. They never fail, like all Microsoft products!

Erica: Then can you read to me the screen behind you and explain the picture that goes with it please?

Microsoft Bob: Read the screen? "Morgan Webb will you marry me?" Not again! Interview over!

Erica: Hmm, I thought he was a boxer man myself, speedos just don't go with that beret! Oh well, up next: we talk to our own Morgan Webb on the "Morgan Webb" controversy!

More Morgan Webb Sooner Than You Think!
