

Surviving the days at TechTV ...

Michaela: What's going on? Are they taking us off the air or what?

Erica: Let me see if I can get an answer, Michaela. Becky, what are you hearing in the newsroom?

Becky: Well, Erica, it seems like there was a vote.
Erica: That's right.
Becky: All of Bill Gates' ex-wives have either declined to vote or haven't voted yet.

Erica: Gee, you're a big help, Becky.
Becky: Listen, sister, I'm down to thirty seconds of airtime a day, don't go complaining to me that I didn't have time to get all the facts in. Why don't you go to Matt in Seattle and --

Erica: Ken? Ken? Why did you cut her off? She was actually helping for once!

Ken Marquis: Sorry Erica, her allotted 30 seconds of airtime was up. Try her again tomorrow!

Erica: But that doesn't make any sense! Why waste Becky's talents by giving her 30 seconds on the air when Po Leo Yo -- when he hasn't "mysteriously disappeared" or "gone on vacation" again -- gets two hours a day to peddle his goods?

Ken Marquis: Uh, what was that Erica? I'm in my car and I'm going through a tunnel now. The line's breaking up! Call you back?

Erica: You know, Ken, that trick doesn't work when I can see you on the monitor ...

Ken Marquis: Ratfarts.

Erica: Fat balding "George Costanza" looking producer 0, hot News Anchor destined for bigger and better things 150. I caught the snitch on that one, folks!

Lindsey: Hmm, instead of my expose on the role of producers here at TechTV ... let's see if we can find Matt in Seattle. Matt, are you there?

Man: No, I can't be changing again!

Man: I have to fight it! I can't become ... him ... again! Stay focused!

Man: Okay serenity now ... serenity now ...

Man: It's not working, I'm changing! No! Can't stop ... must yell ...

Lindsey: What the blue betsy was that?

Michaela: Keep your top on, Lindsey, looks like it's a satellite problem.

Michaela: Folks, on that note, we'll be right back with our own Matt Markovich in Seattle after these messages ...

To Be Continued! Or Something! Huh-huh!
